

Wanted: Copywriter

consense communications a Munich-based PR agency with marketing skills is looking for people who would like to work in our PR network. Specifically, we are looking for natives in Dutch.

As we work with international clients, we must communicate in various languages. The individuals we are looking for are 100% at home in their mother tongue both spoken and written. They have excellent English; they understand any given text and are able to translate it perfectly into their first language. Does this sound like something for you?

This is how you would work with us:

- Most importantly: You can write. Sounds banal but isn't! Ideally you've written articles before; you know how to gather information and structure a text.
- Using an English master, you will be translating, and if necessary (re-)writing, adapting and proofreading texts for us. These might be press releases, websites, statements, or whitepapers, etc.
- Your task will also involve phoning journalists and offering them editorial content about our clients. What will be crucial is to tell them an interesting story and get them hooked on what our clients have to say.
- Last but not least, we'd like you to do some research for us. We will tell you what sort of information we're looking for and you will know where to find it.

Following an introductory briefing, you will receive project-specific briefings either by email or by phone.

At the moment we're assuming that you will work about 10 hours per month. When bigger projects are due you will obviously be busier. So we will be offering performance-related payment with an hourly rate to be negotiated.

About consense communications consense communications is a PR agency that cares for the reputation of companies and products. Our international customers are range from world leaders to start-ups. They depend on our many years of expertise in public relations and marketing across various industries. We act as a full-service agency, creating and running customized communication campaigns for all relevant target groups. As a modern agency, our services naturally cover online-PR, social media, blogs, communities, and twitter.

The client for whom we need your language skills is one of the top five international fleet management providers. The company supports the sustainable design of corporate fleets and mobility management schemes. The company offers individual and innovative solutions and services, from consulting, financing and car services, to complete management solutions.

If you're interested, please contact us:

consense communications gmbh
Nymphenburger Str. 86
80636 München
ka@consense-communications.de t +49. 89. 23 00 26-30
f +49. 89. 23 00 26-79